

2026 (5th) China Copper Week

Standing at the inaugural year of China's 15th Five-Year Plan, the global copper industry is entering a new stage of development reshaped by the energy transition, resource nationalism, geopolitics, and digital intelligence. The value distribution, trade flows, and competitive dynamics of the copper industry chain are undergoing profound transformations, while international cooperation frameworks and multilateral orders have long faced strong headwinds. In response to the complex evolution of both domestic and external environments, China's copper industry firmly anchors itself in the security and self-reliance of the entire industrial chain, continuously consolidating supply chain balance and stability. It is seizing the opportunities brought by green and low-carbon development, artificial intelligence, and computing hub infrastructure as new sources of consumption demand, while steadily enhancing the resilience of the industrial chain. With concerted efforts, the industry is breaking new ground, fostering win-win collaboration, and striving to usher in a new era of high-quality development.

To gain an in-depth understanding of the new transformations in the global copper industry, strengthen the resilience of China's entire copper industrial chain, pool global synergies, and jointly fulfill the shared aspiration for security and high-quality development, Antaiko Information Technology Co., Ltd. is pleased to announce that the "2026 (5th) China Copper Week" will be held on September 8–10, 2026, in Harbin, Heilongjiang Province.
